Jurors in federal court in Brooklyn found Joaquin Guzman, 61, guilty on all 10 U.S. charges.

The world's most infamous cartel boss, Joaquin "El Chapo" Guzman, who rose from poverty in rural Mexico to amass billions of dollars, was found guilty in a U.S. court on Tuesday of smuggling tons of drugs to the United States over a violent, colorful, decades-long career.

Jurors in federal court in Brooklyn convicted Guzman, 61, head of the Sinaloa cartel, on all 10 counts brought by U.S. prosecutors.

Richard Donoghue, the U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, said he expected Guzman to receive life without parole when sentenced on June 25. "It is a sentence from which there is no escape and no return," Donoghue told reporters.

Guzman, one of the major figures in Mexican drug wars that have roiled the country since 2006, become almost legendary for escaping from Mexican high-security jails twice and avoiding massive manhunts. He cultivated a Robin Hood image among the poor in his home state of Sinaloa.

Guzman sat and showed no emotion while the verdict was read. Once the jury left the room, he and his wife Emma Coronel put their hands to their hearts and gave each other the thumbs-up sign. His wife shed tears.

Guzman, whose nickname means "Shorty," was extradited to the United States for trial in 2017 after he was arrested in Mexico the year before.

Though other highranking cartel figures had been extradited previously, Guzman was the first to go to trial instead of pleading guilty.

The 11-week trial, with testimony from more than 50 witnesses.

offered an unprecedented look at the inner workings of the Sinaloa cartel, named for the state in northwestern Mexico where Guzman was born in a poor mountain vil-

The U.S. government said Guzman trafficked tons of cocaine, heroin, marijuana and methamphetamine into the United States over more than two decades, consolidating his power in Mexico through murders and wars with rival cartels.

Small in stature, Guzman's smuggling exploits, the violence he used and the sheer size of his illicit business made Guzman the world's most notorious drug baron since Colombia's Pablo Escobar, who was shot dead by police Guzman's lawyers say he was set up as a "fall guy" by Ismael "El Mayo" Zambada, a powerful drug lord from Sinaloa who remains at large.

leffrey Lichtman, a lawyer for Guzman, told reporters after the verdict that the defense faced an uphill fight, given the amount of evidence the government presented, and the widespread perception that Guzman was already guilty.

"This was a case that was literally an avalanche, avalanche of evidence," Lichtman said. "Of course we're going to appeal."

President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador was elected last year after promising a change to the deadly military-led war against drug gangs, suggesting a negotiated peace and amnesty for nonviolent drug dealers, traffickers and farmers. The most detailed evidence against Guzman came from more than a dozen former associates who struck deals to cooperate with U.S. prosecu-LOCS. REUTERS

El Chapo's rise and fall

Joaquin "El Chapo" Guz- ELUSIVE KINGPIN man, Mexico's most notorious kingpin, shipped tons of drugs around the world, escaped two maximum-security prisons and became one of the world's most-wanted fugitives.

The 61-year-old now faces the prospect of life in prison.

Jurors on Tuesday found Guzman guilty of all 10 counts, including running a criminal enterprise, in a trial that began in November in New York.

The audacious exploits of "El Chapo," or "Shorty," captured the world's imagination and turned him into a folk hero for some in Mexico, despite the thousands of people killed by his brutal Sinaloa cartel.

Security experts concede the 5-foot-6 gangster was exceptional at what he did, managing to outmaneuver, outfight or outbribe his rivals to stay at the top of the drug trade for over a decade.

Rising through the ranks of the drug world, Guzman carefully observed his mentors' tactics and mistakes, forging alliances that kept him one step ahead of the law for years.

Mexican soldiers and U.S. agents came close to Guzman on several occasions, but his layers of bodyguards and spies always tipped him off before they stormed his safe

In preparing for a raid in 2014, U.S. officers restricted information to a shot dead Roman Cathosmall group for fear of corruption among Mexican law enforcement, Drug Enforcement Administration agent Victor Vasquez testified in Guzman's trial.

SINALOA ROOTS

Guzman was born in La Tuna, a village in the Sierra Madre mountains in Sinaloa state where smugglers have been growing opium and marijuana since the early 20th century.

He ascended in the 1980s, working with Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo, alias "The Boss of Bosses," who pioneered cocaine smuggling routes into the United States.

The aspiring capo came to prominence in 1993 when assassins who lic Cardinal Juan Jesus Posadas claimed they had actually been aiming at Guzman.

Two weeks later, police arrested him in Guatemala and extradited him to Mexico. During his eightyear prison stay, Guzman smuggled in lovers, prostitutes and Viagra, according to accounts published in the Mexican media.

After escaping, Guzman expanded his turf by sending in assassin squads with names such as "The Ghosts" and "The Zeta Killers," in reference to the rival Zetas gang.

Guzman hid near his childhood home, agents said, but rumors abounded of him visiting expensive restaurants and paying for all the diners. Rames

Trump doesn't expect shutdown despite disliking deal

With a Friday deadline, it is far from clear if the Republican president would embrace the agreement.

President Donald Trump expressed displeasure on Tuesday with a deal by congressional negotiators on border security spending that offered no funds for his promised U.S.-Mexican border wall, but did not reject it outright and indicated he did not expect another government shutdown.

Trump, who triggered a 35-day closure of about a quarter of the federal government with a December demand for $5.7 billion from Congress to help build the wall, said he has yet to decide whether to support the agreement reached on Monday night by key Democratic and Republican lawmakers.

Funding for the Department of Homeland Security, the Justice Department and a host of other agencies is due to expire on Friday under the stopgap spending measure passed last month by Congress to end the longest federal shutdown in U.S. history.

"I have to study it.
I'm not happy about it,"
Trump told reporters at the White House about the tentative funding deal, which would need to be passed by the Democratic-led House and Republican-controlled Senate and signed by him.

The tentative deal included border security provisions and money for the affected parts of the government funded through Sept. 30, the end of the federal fiscal year.

The Republican president sent mixed messages about another shutdown.

"I don't think you're going to see a shutdown," Trump said, but he added: "If you did have it, it's the Democrats' fault."

Congressional Republicans have shown little appetite for another shutdown after taking heavy criticism over the prior one. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell's comments on the Senate floor touting the agreement reached on Monday night left little doubt that the top Republican in Congress wants Trump to support it.

Top Senate Democrat Chuck Schumer was more direct, saying, "I strongly urge the president to sign this."

Congressional sources said the agreement includes $1.37 billion for new fencing along 55 miles of the southern border but only with currently used designs such as "steel bollard" fencing. It also addresses capacity at immigration detention facilities, specifically the number of beds for people awaiting possible deportation.

Trump has threatened to declare a "national emergency" if Congress does not provide money specifically for the wall, an action he might take to redirect other funds already provided by Congress to pay for wall construction instead. Fellow Republicans have told Trump such a step would almost certainly face a legal challenge.

On Tuesday, Trump made comments that seemed to fit with the idea of declaring an emergency.

"The bottom is on the wall: We're building the wall," Trump said, adding, "we're supplementing things, and moving things around, and we're doing things that are fantastic and taking, really, from far less important areas."

Trump made the wall a central 2016 campaign promise, calling it necessary to combat illegal immigration and drug trafficking. He said Mexico would pay for the wall, but Mexican officials repeatedly rejected that. Democrats have called the project expensive, ineffective and immoral.

The tentative deal still requires congressional staff experts to write formal legislation, filling in details lacking in the broad outline agreed to late on Monday.

McConnell said he hopes his chamber can act on the legislation "in short order," calling the agreement "certainly good news" and saying Democrats had abandoned "unreasonable" demands. MUMBS

1 Injured, 9 displaced in Roxbury 5-alarm house fire

Firefighters battled a huge blaze in freezing temperatures on Tuesday morning.

Firefighters battled a 5-alarm house fire for over an hour in temperatures well below freezing on Tuesday morning.

The Boston Fire Department responded to a report of a 2-alarm fire on Perrin Street in Roxbury at about 9 a.m.

Not long into the battle, BFD officials struck a third alarm and ordered everybody out of home as flames engulfed much of the second floor and attic of the two-family house at 27 and 29 Perrin Street, a few blocks away from Dudley Square.

A fourth alarm was ordered at about 9:15 a.m., as smoke created tough responded. Officials established visibility. At about 9:40 a.m., BFD Chief Joe Finn a collapse zone at about ordered a fifth alarm, 10:30 a.m. as stubborn, immense flames emanatand firefighters began defensive approach, with ed from the smoldering evacuation teams orderroof while all companies ing neighbors out of their worked to contain the homes as precautionary blaze.

Crews were advised of a significant risk of slipping and falling as icy conditions increased after an hour-long deluge of water ran off of the home in temperatures in the mid-20s.

Firefighters were finally able to knock the blaze down at about 11 a.m.

Finn said that one resident was injured with burns on her arms, and that nine people, including three children, were displaced. They were reportedly unharmed. Finn also said that officials estimated a total of $750,000 worth of damage to the house, which was completely destroyed.

"It was well ahead of us before we arrived, and it made its way into the attic space, which makes it more difficult," Finn told WCVB Channel 5. "It got up into the walls in the attic, which made it troublesome to get into."

The cause of the fire is still under investigation. Crews are expected to be on sight for the remainder of the day.

Bob Mould on making room for a little bit of sunshine

The legendary altrock pioneer talks his new album "Sunshine Rock" and why there's always time for a fresh start.

Bob Mould is tired of being angry. At least for now, that is.

For a career that spans over 40 years with such seminal and influential bands as Husker Dü, Sugar and his own solo output, the trailblazing singer-songwriter laid the groundwork with bands like R.E.M. and The Replacements for what modern guitar rock can only aspire to be. But while some of his earlier music was characterized by his scorched earth and highly personal subject matter, his brandnew album "Sunshine Rock," out on Feb. 8, finds Mould looking to lighten the mood just a little bit. But that deserves some context, of course. The new album comes off the heels of a trio of deeply reflective releases: 2012's "Silver Age"; 2014's "Beauty and Run," which came after the death of his father, and 2017's "Patch the Sky," which was written after the death of his mother. Since then, Mould had needed a fresh start both musically and in his personal life. He found a new home in Berlin and began shedding some of the distress that made his most recent alburns so visceral for some of the brightest and most immediate material he has released in years. Metro caught up with Mould to talk about "Sunshine Rock" and the rest of his incredible career.

The new record "Sunshine Rock" comes off a run of some really excellent records. Do you view your new record as a continuation of those records or do you see it as a fresh start?

It was definitely time for a fresh start. I think. you know, losing my dad, writing "Beauty and Ruin"; losing my mom, writing "Patch the Sky." This time around, it was like, I'm hoping for a break here. You know I've had writing at the end of 2016 going into 2017 and then all of a sudden the song "Sunshine Rock" appeared. It became the tentpole for the record. It became the "a-ha" moment. Write to the light, don't write to the dark. You know my work well enough that it takes some effort to make that decision. It's not a natural one for me. So yeah, it was definitely a very conscious decision. Once the brightness appeared, I was like "OK. Let's go with this."

The record has the same blistering guitars usually associated with your work but also introduces some lush orchestral string arrangements. Were you conscious of trying to stretch the arrangements? Making the decision to de strings, or following through and getting everything out, getting the folks in Prague to work on this, that was a late entry into the process. As I'm writing and demo'ing songs, they're fairly elaborate. A lot of times, Ill use keyboards as placeholders for melodies and a couple weeks before we started making this record I sort of woke up one morning and realized I must have more melody! I'm going to destroy things. I'm going to spend five days orchestrating six songs. So, that became my objective, and maybe it was a way to ... I don't know [laughs]. But, I always write with melody in mind.

During your career, you have been championed by record labels that were inspired by the work you had done with Husker Dü

- first with Creation Records signing Sugar, and now with Merge Records putting out your solo releases. Does it feel good to know that your influence is being felt?

I didn't see it coming and I'm grateful for it. I think if we go back to the autobiography in 2011 ("See a Little Light: The Trail of Rage and Melody"), and the Disney Hall tribute show of 2011 that became the concert documentary. I think that's where the stage might have been set for that. I think it created awareness for people who weren't familiar with the work and they came to it by association. I think, specifically with "Merge," originally they were just interested in the Sugar reissues, and I mentioned to them that I might have a new album and I played them some stuff. It was sort of funny because they came originally for nostalgia but ended up with a future. So it was crazy how that happened, right [laughs]?

Fluky injury to David Pastrnak throws wrench in Bruins season

The Bruins star forward suffered a thumb injury that will hold him out for at least two weeks.

Truth be told, there is no good time to have your best offensive player suffer an injury during a season, but in the Bruins case with star right winger David Pastrnak (31 goals, 35 assists), this feels like a particularly cruel twist of fate.

Along with some of his teammates, Pastrnak attended a sponsorship dinner on Sunday night and afterward, he fell getting into a car and injured his left thumb. He has already had surgery on it according to

Bruins general manager
Don Sweeney and he will be out for at least two weeks before being re-evaluated.

Dish the trade dead

With the trade deadline now less than two weeks away (Feb. 25, 3 p.m.), this puts the Bruins in a tricky position because other teams will realize that Boston now has an even bigger need for an additional scoring punch up front with Pastrnak out.

"It's very unfortunate," noted Bruins captain Zdeno Chara. "We're going to miss David for a period of time, we have to play and focus on what we have to do without him."

Already in his fifth NHL season, Pastrnak was having a career year as he looked like a lock to surpass his careerhigh totals of 35 goals and 45 assists from last season.

He missed plenty of action in his first two campaigns, but he had become an iron man of sorts over the past few years: He played in 75 games in 2016-17 and all 82 games last season. His absence started on Tuesday, leaving center David Krejci (12 goals, 31 assists) as the only other Bruin to appear in every contest so far in 2018-19.

Obviously, the team will try to put on a brave face when addressing Pastrnak being out, what else do you expect them to say? Head coach

Bruce Cassidy called it "an opportunity for others to step up. This team is used to playing tight games, that will probably be the formula moving forward."

To spread out the scoring, Pastrnak had actually been dropped to the second line over the weekend with Danton Heinen (eight goals, eight assists) getting elevated to the top line. With Pastrnak out at morning skate on Tuesday, David Backes - who was a healthy scratch on Sunday vs. Colorado was inserted back on the third line and struggling Jake DeBrusk (14 goals, five assists) was boosted to the second line with Krejci and rookie Peter Cehlarik (three goals, one assist).

In terms of temporary solutions (if you want to call it that) coming from within the organization, Ryan Donato (six goals, three assists) would be the call-up from Providence that makes the most sense although he's only totaled two goals and an assist in five games in the AHL since his recent demotion from Boston.

There have been plenty of NHL scouts at TD Garden lately along with a myriad of reports of Boston's possible trade interest in veteran wingers like Philadelphia's Wayne Simmonds or Carolina's Micheal Ferland. The price to get players of their ilk shouldn't be too high and while Cassidy jokingly mentioned Columbus star Artemi Panarin at a press conference last week (tampering much?), it's doubtful that Sweeney would want to part with the ransom it would take to secure the super-talented Russian who is due to be a free agent on July 1.
